MENACE TO SCHOOLS

REV. WM. HUGHES SAYS THAT SPIRIT OF LAW SHOULD BE OBSERVED

Rev. William Hughes, who is acting pastor of the Glendale Catholic church in the temporary absence of Rev. Jas. S. O'Neill, delivered the address to the graduates of the Sacramento high school June 17. On the morning of commencement day the following editorial appeared in the Sacramento Bee:

"Reverend William Hughes, a Sacramento young man and a Catholic priest, assistant director of the Catholic Indian mission of this country, is to deliver the address to the graduating class of the Sacramento high school at the exercises tonight in McKinley park.

"Undoubtedly Reverend Hughes will make an excellent impression, and undoubtedly he will respect the non-sectarian character of the public schools and will have in that address not the slightest tinge of creed.

"At the same time, no priest, minister or rabbi ever should be asked to deliver the graduation or any similar address before the public school children. While many of them will have the good judgment not to overstep the bounds of propriety, and not to utter anything that would breathe of sectarianism, a great many of them have not that much discretion.

"And the fact is that addresses of this character permitted in the past to be given by ministers of certain creeds, have been punctuated with the rankest kind of sectarian teachings.

"The Bee ever has protested against the growing and multiplying menace to the public schools of public school graduation exercises being held in Protestant churches, the pupils being addressed by Protestant ministers.

"It protests with equally as much vigor against the selection of a Catholic priest to deliver the graduation address to the high school graduates of this community."

In reply, Father Hughes sent to The Bee this letter, which was published:

"To the Editor of The Bee—Sir: Your editorial of June 17th entitled 'No Priest, Minister or Rabbi Should Be Selected,' refers to the address which was delivered by me to the graduating class of the Sacramento high school. Besides the personal compliments, for which I thank you, you make two points: First, you declare that 'no priest, minister or rabbi ever should be asked to deliver the graduation or any similar address before the public school children'; and, secondly, you protest 'against the growing and multiplying menace to the public schools of public school graduation exercises being held in Protestant churches.'

"The second point is so well taken that I might waive replying to the first if it were only a personal matter. But in the objection to any priest, minister or rabbi talking at public school exercises, a principle is involved which cannot be waived. The principle is this, that any honorable citizen who is able to talk profitably, should be eligible to address public school children on proper occasion. And the fact that he is priest, minister or rabbi should not weigh either for or against him. He speaks, if he speak at all, as a citizen, and for his citizenship he need apologize to no man.

"The argument which you advance in favor of your first point is 'that addresses of this character, permitted in the past to be given by ministers of certain creeds, have been punctuated with the rankest kind of sectarian teachings.'

"If some ministers of religion have offended, must all suffer because of their mistakes? If editors, lawyers or doctors sometimes show the same poor taste, must all editors, lawyers and doctors be forbidden to talk at public school exercises?

"But to return to the second point, which is so well taken that it will do well to accentuate it.

"Article 9, section 8, of the constitution of California expressly forbids that 'any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught or instruction therein be permitted, directly or indirectly, in any of the common schools of this state.'

"And the penalty is attached that 'any teacher in the public schools breaking this law forfeits his or her salary.'

"Certainly any religious teaching in the public schools is forbidden by this law. By the spirit, if not 'directly or indirectly' by the letter of the law, the holding of public school exercises in a church—Protestant, Catholic or Jewish—and particularly where a baccalaureate sermon is a part of the exercises—is forbidden.

"Finally, that prayer at public school exercises held outside of a church is also forbidden, may be a debatable question. Certainly, I personally would not offer a prayer upon such an occasion, because it seems to me to be against the spirit of the law. And how could I, either as a citizen or a teacher of religion and morality, break the law and at the same time teach respect for the law?"

WILLIAM HUGHES.

JUST TWO WEEKS OLD

DESIRE TO GET VOTES IN THE EVENING NEWS CONTEST PARAMOUNT ISSUE

The start of the second week of the Evening News contest finds over a dozen people with just one idea firmly entrenched in their minds—namely, "to get votes"—and thus in the first grand prize of the $500 Maxwell touring car, the $400 Schiller piano, a trip to the exposition, a scholarship to the Isaacs-Woodbury Business college, a $50 deposit at the First National bank of Glendale or some other prize.

Most of the candidates have been "resting on their oars," figuratively speaking, until after the list was published Friday in order to see what they were "up against," and now they are going to apply themselves in earnest fashion, for the time now left to poll votes is not so long—just eight short weeks.

As the race has now just commenced, additional candidates who have been waiting to see who is in the fieid will enter the race in the next few days, and add somewhat to the list, which will be published again Thursday.

Candidates will remember that they may solicit votes and subscriptions in any district or territory they choose. They are not limited to their own town or locality; the entire world is their field. Letters might be written to your friends; the telephone makes you a next door neighbor to all of your local acquaintances. If these methods are put to use, many votes can be garnered. The diligent saving of the free-vote coupons appearing daily in The News are important additions that should not be overlooked. They also may be gathered in any territory or district, although coupons count for little as compared to subscriptions.

Now is the opportune time to start in this campaign. It's just beginning to assume larger proportions and those who hustle for votes now might easily be at the top one week hence. The prizes offered make it well worth your time.

If you have not yet been nominated, better see that your name appears in the next list, for the accepted time to enter The News contest is this week. You cannot put it off much longer without seriously handicapping your chances of winning a valuable prize. Contestants or their friends who do not clearly understand the contest are urged to call at or phone The News office, where any points not fully understood will be explained. It is a good idea for all who have not already done so to make a personal call. They can in that way become very much more familiar with the rules of the campaign, the method of procuring votes and the prizes that will be offered.

BALL GAME AT VERDUGO PARK

The Glendale ball club annexed another game to the correct side of the ledger Sunday when they defeated the Fritz poolhall team of Los Angeles in a very spicy game on the local ground at Verdugo park.

The main features of the game were Wilkinson's homer and two very brilliant double plays by Laughlin, the local shortstop.

Lawrence, who did the leaving for the locals, had the visitors at his mercy at almost every stage of the game.

LaRock, who worked on the mound for the visitors, pitched good ball, but weakened a couple of times, allowing the locals to annex the winning runs.

The local team has reorganized and have strengthened their club considerable and under the management of Van Osdoll promise to give the fans some very good games in the future.

Score by innings:

Glendale.....	1	0	2	0	0	0	2	1	x	—6
Fritz P. H.	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	—1

W. GLENDALE QUEEN ESTHERS

The Queen Esther circle of the West Glendale M. E. church will hold their monthly meeting in the primary room of the church Saturday at 2:30. All the members are urged to be present and help plan the social for July. The meeting will be turned over to the new officers.

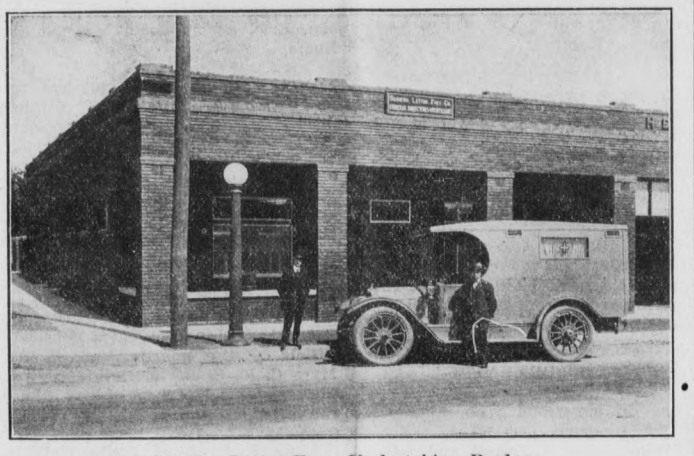
A neutral nation is expected to find the happy medium between burdensome militarism and "peace at any price."

SCOVERN-LETTON-FREY CO. IS WELL EQUIPPED

NEW UNDERTAKING PARLORS AT THE CORNER OF BRAND AND ACACIA, TROPICO, ARE THOROUGHLY UP-TO-DATE AND THE SERVICE IS OF THE BEST

One of the business concerns of this community of which the entire valley should be proud is the Scovern-Letton-Frey Undertaking company. This firm is composed of Messrs. Louis G. Scovern, W. R. Letton and R. E. Frey, who opened their establishment in Tropico less than a year ago and are now nicely located in the new building on the corner of Brand boulevard and Acacia avenue in quarters especially designed for them.

The average person gives little thought to the ability or the equipment of the undertaker of his community until the time comes when there is a need for his services, and then there is a feeling that the last service performed for the loved one must be the best in every way that can be provided. The undertaking parlors are not frequently visited as are other business houses in the community until necessity compels, and then if the bereaved ones find rooms airy and bright with sunshine, comfortably and beautifully furnished and equipped with the best and latest appliances for caring for the dead, there is a feeling of satisfaction that the last sad offices are being performed under such conditions.



Scovern-Letton-Frey Undertaking Parlors

The Scovern-Letton-Frey undertaking parlors are sunny, cheerful rooms. On the right of the large central hall is the office, which is very roomy and very comfortably and prettily furnished. A large fireplace of ruffle brick, the first of the kind to be built in the valley, lends an air of comfort to the room. On the north side of the building is the large chapel, well lighted and furnished with arm chairs that harmonize with the finishing of the room. In addition to these, the company has several dozen folding chairs which they take to the home when funeral services are held there or loan free of charge for other occasions.

At the time of a funeral the casket is placed near the doorway between the chapel and the family room, which is furnished with a beautiful rug and large, comfortable chairs of excellent design. A double entrance at the front of the chapel to the north is convenient for removing the casket from the building. One end of the spacious hall is screened off for the organist and singers during the time of the service.

At the rear of the office is the laying-out room, elegantly fitted up. A beautiful gray velvet laying-out couch, with cushion and hangings of the same material, is used here or taken to the home for use before the remains are placed in the casket. This one feature alone is a most decided improvement over old methods used in laying out the dead.

The morgue room, at the rear of the building, is fitted with modern appliances and is finished in white enamel. A cabinet is well stocked with all the necessary things known to science for the care and preservation of the remains of the dead. A dressing case well filled is kept ready at all times so that they never need to ask the members of the family for these little things that are so necessary.

No doubt the stock room of the Scovern-Letton-Frey company would be a revelation to many people in the valley. They have on hand a very large stock ranging from the inexpensive to the most beautifully designed and trimmed caskets that can be made. They do not carry the line of caskets that are sold by the city undertakers for $70, but instead for those who want an inexpensive funeral there is a casket of good design, crepe covered, for $70, which includes all funeral expenses. This is the same casket which the city undertakers furnish for $90. From this up there are caskets of every grade, including the beautiful polished hard woods, circassian walnut and solid mahogany, those with rich imported silk velvet coverings and hangings, in most beautiful shades of gray, purple, ashes of roses and other shades, metal lined and most beautifully upholstered. Special attention is given to the hardware used on the caskets, the designs and colorings of the handles being made to harmonize with the hangings in every way, a feature that adds much to the effect. This work, as well as the upholstering, is done here.

In the rear of the parlors is a spacious garage where the hearse, touring car, which is at the disposal of patrons in making funeral arrangements, and the ambulance are kept. The ambulance was built especially for this company and is used only for the purpose for which it was built. It is well ventilated, electric lighted and equipped with first aid to the injured, including thermos bottles, hot water bags, etc.

This company also has a burial vault built of specially prepared cement that is absolutely impervious to water and is airtight, that they furnish to many of their patrons who appreciate the advantage that such an appliance offers.

The Scovern-Letton-Frey company have been at enormous expense in equipping this up-to-date mortuary, and further expense is contemplated. This is a business in which the best is demanded and appreciated by the patrons and the company already feels repaid for what has been expended in knowing that they can fulfill the wants of the people of the community at the time when such services are required.

Those who know say that many of the best undertaking parlors in Los Angeles are not so well equipped as these.

But important as these things are, the knowledge that the loved one is being prepared for the last long sleep by hands that are reverent and gentle and by one who has had experience and is capable of performing this last sad office in the most expeditious manner is perhaps more appreciated even than modern appliances and costly equipment. No one acquainted with the members of this firm but knows that they feel the responsibility, and merit the confidence reposed in them by those who seek their services.

WESTWARD BOUND

The time is now here when men and women from the East are paying a visit to California. Many of them are seeing the great state for the first time. They should see all of California while here. The entire state is worth seeing. Many of these people are here to attend a national convention, but while here they all insist upon seeing California.

It would seem that the rank and file of the citizens of this great state have not awakened to the fact that so many sightseers are now in our land. The visitors have been coming with a gradual increase until now they are arriving in throngs and great crowds.

Every community should strive to make the visit a pleasant one for the strangers who come within their walls. This is the year California is entertaining the world. San Diego and San Francisco may be exposition points, and of course everybody is desirous of visiting the expositions, but in addition to that, everybody is anxious to see California as she exists in nature. California's mountains, California's good roads, California's orange groves and California's wonders in many ways are all we'l worth seeing. Assist your eastern friends to have a pleasant time.

TO LEARN OF GARDENS

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MAKING GREAT PROGRESS—NUMBERS JOINING

When the members of the Glendale Horticultural society meet tonight in the high school they will be agreeably surprised by the progress that has been made since the last meeting in the way of bringing in new members. The garden party arranged at the home of Mrs. Nanno Woods, secretary of the association, last Thursday, was an immense success. Mrs. Ella Richardson and Mrs. Woods had succeeded in bringing together a number of enthusiastic lovers of gardens and flowers.

With the nucleus of about forty active members the society will meet tonight in the high school, when Principal G. U. Moyse will put before them the plans for the organization of the club. Now is the time to join and have a voice in the arrangements that will be made for the establishment of the society on a broad and democratic basis.

Everyone is urged to come out and bring friends interested in the establishment in Glendale of a working floral society. The plans formulated tonight will have a great deal to do with the success of the society and will determine the lines on which its development shall proceed.

The meeting will be held at 8 p. m. sharp.

CHILDREN'S MUSICALE

The children's musicale to be given in the Glendale Union high school Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock, promises to be the leading social event of the week. The musicale is to be given by Miss Ruby Dale's pupils and is a benefit for the Pacific avenue school playground.

Miss Dale's remarkable success with her pupils is demonstrated by the spelndid program she has arranged and which will be given on Wednesday evening. The Kinder Symphonie by Cornelius Gurlitt is given by Miss Dale's pupils with that fine interpretation that would be creditable in older pupils who have had the experience of years and careful study. The following program will insure a large audience to assist with the benefit for this worthy cause:

MRS. J. H. SHERDAIN

Mrs. J. H. Sherdain, a native of Belgium, passed away at the California hospital Saturday, June 25, at the age of 43 years. Her father, J. A. Weaver, was the late ambassador to Belgium.

Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. today in the chapel of the Scovern-Letton-Frey company and the remains were placed in the vault in Forest Lawn cemetery until September 15, when they will be shipped east for burial.

The deceased leaves a sister, Mrs. George A. Graff of San Fernando, and two aunts residing at the Lankershim hotel in Los Angeles, who will accompany the remains east in September.

PICNIC WENT ASTRAY

HOLIDAY VISITORS LANDED AT CASA VERDUGO INSTEAD OF VERDUGO PARK

What was the mistake of the Los Angeles people in charge of the arrangements for a picnic party that was headed for Verdugo park nearly precipitated a riot at Casa Verdugo Saturday. It seems that a body of police detectives and their friends thought it well to refresh themselves after their long winter's work by a visit to the sylvan shades of Verdugo park, the beauties of which they had often heard described.

To the charms of that rural paradise they hastened by the conveyance of the Pacific Electric railway; but someone had blundered. To the purely American ear, it may be supposed, Casa Verdugo and Verdugo park seemed the same thing, and, whoever was to blame for the mistake, the railroad shipped its customers out to the former place instead of the latter.

When the large party of picnickers found themselves dumped off at Casa Verdugo, they regarded the mistake at first in the light of a joke. They laughed, sang and made merry, believing that the railroad people would soon remedy the blunder. Moments passed into minutes, minutes dragged along until nearly an hour had elapsed, and still there was no sign of help being at hand.

The Los Angeles people then demanded that the conductor take them back to Brand and Broadway, whence they could get a car to Verdugo park. The conductor refused to do this, alleging that he had no orders to that effect and that he could not take the matter into his own hands. This roused one of the Los Angeles party, who is alleged to have struck the conductor.

Thereupon a scene of great excitement ensued in the course of which a call was sent to the Glendale police, who appeared on the scene, but finding that the alleged assault had taken place in the Burbank jurisdiction, they turned the matter over to the authorities of that place.

After some discussion and dispute as to the facts and on agreement by the Los Angeles parties that the alleged offender would be ready to answer any summons that might be issued for him, the whole party proceeded to get on in the direction of their original destination. Word had come from Los Angeles to convey the party to Verdugo park, which was accordingly done. The large party got on their way and reached the cooling shades of the park, where amid the natural beauty of the scene and the assuaging properties of the picnic refreshments, they speedily recovered their genial tone and enjoyed the rest of the evening without anything to mar their pleasure.

DR. McLAREN TO LECTURE

Dr. James H. McLaren, the dramatic orator of California and recognized as one of the foremost lecturers of America, will deliver his great lecture on "The Flags of the World" Monday evening, June 28, at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational church, corner Third and Central.

Dr. McLaren is a man of charming personality and to hear him is a rare privilege. Two things especially characterize him—one of these is his thorough scholarship, Dr. McLaren being identified with or holding degrees from six colleges and universities, among them being Brown university, Andover and Yale. In his preparation of a lecture he spares no labor or expense in getting material, not only in his search for the best written authority, but in visiting foreign lands. In other words, McLaren is not one of those lecturers who guess their way through a subject. He has his facts. But of equal importance is the simplicity of his style. His platform work is not for the few, but for the many. He has had wonderful success in making great things plain, so that while the most cultured praise his eloquence as marvelous, the children understand every word of it.

The theme of his lecture for this evening is that of world patriotism. It deals with the history, the legends, the great men, the battles, the statesmanship, of many peoples, from Egypt, Rome, Greece to the nations of today. One who hears it feels at once that he is listening first of all to a thorough student; and also to one who has a keen sense of the dramatic in the life of every nation. There is no mere array of facts and dates, but a picture on a big scale of human life; a story of the march from savagery to the highest citizenship of today.

Every resident of Glendale is urged to hear Dr. McLaren. Admission is free.

If a lazy man has nowhere else to go, he ought to go to work.

SELF-CONFIDENCE IS SUCCESS

Distrust of oneself is the cause of most of our failures. In the assurance of strength there is strength. Those who have no faith in themselves or their powers are the weakest of all human beings. "Self-respect," said Herschel, the astronomer, "is the cornerstone of all virtue." "Above all things reverence yourself," said Pythagoras.

"It never pays to respect a man who does not respect himself," say the Chinese. If the world sees that you do not honor yourself it is very apt to reject you as an impostor. It is never possible to gain and keep the good opinion of others when you have not your own good opinion.

We are stamping our real value on ourselves daily and cannot expect to pass for more than that value. Great men usually have had great confidence in themselves. "Fear not," said Caesar to the pilot as the storm roared round the ship; "fear not, you carry Caesar and his fortunes."

"If a man possess the consciousness of what he is," said Schelling, "he will soon also learn what he ought to be; let him have a theoretical respect for himself, and a practical will soon follow." Anyone who is firmly persuaded that he can command resources virtually has them. Kossuth, the famous Hungarian patriot, once said, "Humility is the part of wisdom and is most becoming to men, but let no one discourage self-reliance; it is, of all the rest, the greatest quality of true manliness."

Before a tree can bear fruit it must be rooted in the soil. A man in like manner must learn to stand upright on his own feet, to respect himself, to be independent of charity or accident. Only on this basis can any superstructure of intellectual cultivation that is worth having possibly be built. Self-respect of the right kind lifts us above all meanness and makes us independent of slights and snubs. Nature gives man large hope lest he falter before reaching the high mark she sets for him.

From the standpoint of morals it is usually safe to trust those who can trust themselves. When a man suspects his own integrity it is time that he were suspected by others. Moral degradation always begins at home. The world will take a man at his own estimate until he proves himself unworthy. The world admires courage and manliness and despises a young man who goes about with an air of perpetual apology for the unpardonable sin of being in the world.

Self-reliance is the grandest element in character; it wins Olympic crowns and Isthmian laurels. It makes us kin to those men who have vindicated their divine right to be held in the world's memory. Self-confidence and self-respect give a sense of power that nothing else can bestow. The weak, the dependent, the vacillating, the undecided never can know nor even understand the pride that glows in him who relies on himself.

"This above all—to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

MOUNTAINS OUT OF MOLEHILLS

It is narrated of a once-famous editor of a leading daily that returning home one night from a convivial meeting of mystic brethren, he bumped his editorial countenance severely; whereupon there appeared next day in his journal a scathing editorial on the laxity of the city council in leaving obstructions in the public streets. There is a similar tendency in many public men to exaggerate events and magnify trifles, solely because they affect themselves.

Just because an event has a personal bearing and therefore has acquired importance in our own eyes is no reason why anyone—doctor, editor, clergyman or lawyer—should ask the long-suffering public to join them in their protests or outcries. The self-centered individual has stumbled over a mole-hill and immediately to his distorted vision it assumes the proportions of a mountain and towers above him "as huge as high Olympus."

All men who are brought much in contact with the public in the practice of their profession are really public trustees. All that is personal and petty must be forgotten in the discharge of their duty and they must make no such grievous error as to drag personal likes or dislikes into the arena of their activities. To be absolutely disinterested; to have no inclination toward one side or the other; to be ready to see good even in an opponent; to have the largeness of mind and the nobility of soul that can sweep aside personal prejudice and act on the widest principles for the good of a community, is not easy; it is not common; but it is the only correct attitude of the man to the community.

Public men should be of the mental caliber that disregards all that is small and mean; all that is purely selfish and narrow. To brush aside all temptation to use one's position for personal ends or the gratification of personal spite or malice is what every community demands of those who are in a position of trust. Forgetting oneself; forgetting what might at first judgment appear to be a personal slight or personal injury and to look forward to the larger vision of the soul; to that higher region of which Goethe spoke, "where nobler things dwell," is what is demanded of those who would fain be intrusted with what concerns the betterment of man.

Nothing in this world is more contemptible than the spirit that is forever narrowing down the events of life to fit them into a narrow mind; nothing is greater than the spirit that can look beyond the narrowness of life; that sees things in their true proportions and never mistakes a mole-hill for a mountain. It is this spirit that, as Horace says, "alone can make and keep a man happy." It is this spirit that is the very salt of any community and keeps it fresh and wholesome. This spirit is the spirit of the divine in man that is never concerned with personal safety; but gives itself freely and willingly and never magnifies the gift.

OPPORTUNITY

They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each day I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanish joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say "I can."
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep
But yet might rise and be again a man.

Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous retribution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past
And find the future's pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell.
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven.
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven—Walter Malone.

A NAUTICAL EXPRESSION

The officers were on the quarter deck looking at a comet and noticed an eager discussion among the crew forward. The captain called one of the men aft and asked him what was the subject of discussion.

"We were trying to make out what that there thing was," replied the man, pointing to the comet.

"And what do you imagine it is?"

"Dunno, your honor, but Bill Jones here, as knows most things, says as how it's a star that's sprung a leak."—London Telegraph.

The newspaper is the only effieient means of acquainting the public with the business news of the town. For one person that will learn something about a given store by word of mouth, a hundred learn about it through newspaper notices. The advertising columns of a newspaper are read just as attentively as any sensation that may appear in the news columns.

A mind fed largely on novels and "movies" is as pasty and inefficient as a body constantly stimulated by cocktails.

Another reason why a rooster is like a man is because when he crows he thinks he has said something.

When a man has no end in view, we can usually see his finish.

CHILDREN SHOW TALENT

It is not often that one is privileged to hear so many talented children as those who exhibited the results of their training by Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan on Saturday evening at the Sloan residence, 1550 Myrtle street. The children who have been studying piano, Delsarte, expression and elocution with Mrs. Sloan for some time gave a most wonderful exhibition of what good training can do.

This recital of children of the first and second years' classes attracted a large gathering of parents and friends. The rooms were crowded and all the spare chairs in the neighborhood were requisitioned for the occasion. Among the striking features of the long program was a Shakespearean dialogue by two little girls, Shirley Chase and Dorothy Bonnell, both of whom exhibited extraordinary talent.

Another attractive number was a dialogue in Dutch dialect. The vocal numbers elicited much pleasing comment from the friends of the pupils who were delighted with the wonderful expression the children managed to infuse into their different pieces.

The same quality of "soul" was apparent in the piano playing, which was a revelation to most of those present.

Miss Clementina Landmann of New York, who sang so charmingly at the Shakespearean recital at Mrs. Sloan's a few days ago, was among the guests at the children's recital and expressed herself more than delighted with every number on the program. Miss Landmann will take up the department of violin in connection with Mrs. Sloan's academy of music on July 1.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

That the great European conflict now raging was caused primarily by a proud and puffed-up spirit was the statement made by Mr. Francis in his sermon Sunday morning.

The more we think about this, the more we will be convinced that it is absolutely true, and the more profound will appear to us that one of the Beatitudes which says, "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." This also makes very clear the fact that we are not sufficient unto ourselves and do not contain in our own natures enough of God and of his power to be independent of him as a personality, as some latter-day scholars would have us believe.

Altogether the sermon was one of the best which Mr. Francis has delivered in many weeks.

The innovation of stereopticon pictures to illustrate the evening service was well received and was greatly enjoyed by a large number of children who were present.

"From the Creation to the Deluge" formed the subject of the evening and others to follow on succeeding Sunday evenings are expected to be of deep interest and of great help to these services.

The contest between the men's and women's classes, which closed Sunday, was won by the women, the men having fallen down badly during the past few weeks. A new campaign for members is about due, and will be necessary to maintain the average of the class during the summer months.

The annual picnic of the Bible school will be held next Thursday at Verdugo park. A majority of those who attend by trolley will take the 9:35 car, but as cars run at this same time every hour, if you cannot get the 9:35, go out any time during the day. Full baskets and a jolly carefree day will be enjoyed. All those connected with the school in any way are cordially invited.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held on Tuesday instead of Thursday this week. This is on account of the picnic and the ladies will please take notice.

Don't forget to attend and to push the interest in the mid-week prayer meeting. It is the best and most important meeting of the church.

LUTHERAN CHURCH

The service Sunday morning, both with Sunday school and divine worship, spelled progress and increasing interest. We welcomed some new scholars. Sorry to know of some of our most regular scholars to be ab- Fight and Its True Meaning" in our struggle with temptations, trials, sorrows, unpleasantnesses, had in it a helpfulness and suggestiveness that left its impress in encouragement and hopefulness. All were very attentive. One of the pleasing features of the morning service was the part taken by the children's choir presided over and directed by the pastor's eleven-year-old daughter, the church organist. It was charming and most beautiful as the sweet-voiced children sang "I'll Be a Sunbeam." Then the solo of the organist herself, with her strong, sweet, clear soprano voice in "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," filling the entire building, added not a little to the religious enjoyment of the entire service.

Next Sunday being the Glorious Fourth, the pastor is arranging for a patriotic service at the 11 o'clock hour. All the patriotic orders of Glendale, Tropico and Casa Verdugo sent for several weeks down in the apricot country about Ontario.

The pastor's message of "Our Daily have been invited to be present to enjoy the hour. The pastor will bring a timely message on "The Mission of Our American Republic." And just now while the great European nations are in the terrific throes of conflict, and we have declared our neutrality, it is well at this time that as citizens we gather together to observe the God-given mission of our great nation. There will be decorations in harmony with the hour. Professor Laichinger will render a patriotic musical program. All citizens are most cordially invited to attend this service. You are welcome at all times.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION GROWTH

Once more the university extension division of the University of California has grown out of house and home.

So great has been the expansion of its work that the department must move from its present quarters in the university library to the top floor of the administration building, California hall, where it will occupy exactly twice as much room as heretofore.

More than 3400 people have enrolled for correspondence courses during the past two years. At the present moment, although the middle of summer, 2000 people are actually at work in correspondence courses. Among the varied subjects in which correspondence instruction is now being given by the university extension division are English, mathematics, electrical engineering, mechanical and free-hand drawing, accounting, stenography, bookkeeping, typewriting, Spanish, French Italian, German, Chinese, Latin, political science, education, international law, commercial law, architecture, general biology, anthropology, oral and dental hygiene and household economics.

IN NATIONAL FORESTS

LOCAL SENTIMENT FAVORS GOVERNMENT DEVELOPMENT OF PUBLIC RESOURCES

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The first-hand impressions and experiences gained on his thirty-day tour of the national forests are described as "invaluable" by Secretary of Agriculture Houston in a letter which he has sent on his return to Washington to the chief forester, expressing his approval of the administrative work and methods of the forest service.

Starting out with the expressed intention of seeing the work with his own eyes and studying on the ground the principal problems involved in managing and developing the forest resources of the country, Secretary Houston visited typical forests in each of the six forest districts of the West, penetrating into the wilds on logging locomotives, automobiles, horseback, and at times on foot, and getting into personal touch, not only with the rangers and guards, but with homesteaders, cattlemen, lumberjacks and others among whom the forest officers do their work.

"I especially desired to familiarize myself," says the secretary in his letter to the forester, "with the administrative machinery and business methods, to acquaint myself with the grazing conditions, the water-power developments, the timber operations, the relation of the forests to agriculture, the road and trail and other improvements, the recreational use of the forests, other uses, and to see some of the typical homestead claims. I was afforded an opportunity to see typical forests in each of the districts and some of the more striking operations of each of them.

"I regret that it was physically impossible for me to visit more of the forests in each district. I feel, however, that I accomplished my main purposes and that the results of my trip are invaluable. I was exceedingly gratified with the evidences of enthusiasm, loyalty and devotion to duty on the part of all representatives of the department with whom I came in contact. I was especially impressed with the intelligent and sympathetic attitude between the forest service and the users of the forests and of all communities dependent upon them. It was pleasing to observe that in the forests themselves the residents and other users look to the forest officers, not only for information bearing on forestry problems in which they are interested, but also for assistance in many other matters. The efficient and sympathetic handling of forestry problems on the part of the service, in the interest not only of the nation, but particularly of the sections in which the forests are located, gives promise of the successful solution of any problems that may confront us."

In a statement supplementing his letter, Secretary Houston said that among the first of the activities with which he came in contact was the recreational use of the national forests, under which upward of a million persons every year travel, camp, fish, hunt or maintain summer homes and resorts in the forests. The tour of inspection began on the Santa Fe forest, New Mexico, where many summer homes have been built in the mountains. In the Coconino and Tusayan forests, Arizona, which border the famous Grand Canyon, the secretary was particularly impressed, he said, by the necessity of improvements which will make the canyon more accessible to the public and which are being constructed by the forest service on these and other forests as rapidly as funds permit, nearly 3000 miles of road and 21,000 miles of trail having been built on all of the national forests up to date.

On the Angeles forest in Southern California the secretary said he saw a striking illustration of the importance of forest protection of watersheds, which in this locality has contributed to the irrigation development that in twenty years has transformed a desert into one of the most flourishing agriculture sections of the country. He visited some of the 1100 towns and cities which derive their domestic water supply from national forests and, after climbing the Sierra Nevada range in an automobile that was fitted to the railway with special flanged wheels, he inspected one of the largest water-power projects on the forests, a fourteen-million dollar plant operated under permit in the Sierra national forest. With regard to water power, development of which is going on actively under the department of agriculture's regulations, the secretary said that he saw no need for a change in the existing system of control, except for legislation to permit long-term leasing of water-power sites.

Another reason why a man is so strong for his platform during the campaign is that he is going to forget what was in it after the election.

A man may think he can write of war's horrors after being run down by an auto, but it all depends on the make of the machine.

In hard times people postpone paying their bills for necessaries and spend more for luxuries.

When trouble calls we are more apt to be at home than when fortune knocks.

Marriage is the monotony that relieves the excitement of life.

FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES

A little four-year-old who lives not so far away has a reputation for bright remarks. Commenting on the arrival of a baby at the home of a neighbor, this little tot remarked: "Gee, mamma, that stork must help God a lot."

On another occasion an older sister made the statement that the oyster must suffer when the pearl is taken from the shell. The baby replied, "No, the oysters do not suffer." Surprised, the older sister asked, "How do you know they do not?"

"I know because I have seen them swimming."

"You have seen them swimming? Where?"

"In the soup."

Another little four-year-old one day was busily engaged watching the construction work on a new residence near his home. The workmen spied the lad and began plying him with questions:

"What's your father's name?" No response.

"Where does he live?" No response.

What does he work at?" Still no answer.

Determined to awaken the little tot from his reverie, the next question came:

"Say, son, is your father a human being?"

Quick came the rejoinder:

"No, he's an Elk."

DR. HILGARD HONORED

A marble chair is to be placed in the Greek theater at the University of California in honor of Dr. Eugene Woldemar Hilgard, practically the founder of the science of the geology of the soil, known the world around for his discoveries as to the reclamation of alkali soils, the man who established at Berkeley the first agricultural experiment station ever founded by an American university, and first dean of the college of agriculture and first director of agricultural experiment stations of the University of California.

This chair has just been given by one of Professor Hilgard's old students, Mr. William M. Fitzhugh, as a mark of the affection which so many generations of former students of the university feel for Professor Hilgard, and to make permanent memorial on the campus of Professor Hilgard's inestimably valuable services to the farmers and fruit growers of California, to the progress of agricultural science, and to the welfare of the whole community.

So memorably successful has been the outcome of Professor Hilgard's life work in establishing the college of agriculture of the university on firm foundations, that the college of agriculture this year had 619 students in full courses in the university while for the coming year the expenditure of the university on agriculture teaching and research will be more than half a million dollars.

"CHOOSE TO LOSE THE BLUES" AT PALACE GRAND TONIGHT

For tonight Elsie Janis films into Glendale as "Kitty" in the "Caprices of Kitty."

Never stupid or pendantic is this comedy romantic, of wilfully capricious, though delicious, little Kit. As her guardian adores her, Kitty pleads that school life bores her; she would like to—for a bracer—drive her racer around a bit. Breaking rule and regulation, to the teacher's consternation, she started off quite gaily for her daily little whirl—unchaperoned. But fates decreed a blow-out—put an end to speed; a passer-by, he chanced to spy, the motor and the girl. Next day true love erratically swerves off and ends dramatically; a tramp steals Kitty's motor, as they loiter, he and she. By the wayside half surviving, Kitty's mad and reckless driving, sits the chaperone—still waiting and debating angrily. Now the principal undaunted by the fib the culprits flaunted, "Engaged! Of course it's proper!" Did it stop her? Nothing could! In sooth she reprimanded while the guardian demanded quite dramatically, emphatically: "We'll settle that for good!" Fun to feel your pulses quicken when the plot begins to thicken, fortune favors clever Kitty, to outwit the will in time. And the climax, so surprising, we will leave to your surmising, far too clever to endeavor to deliver it in rhyme.

In addition to the Elsie Janis feature, a rich American comedy of American life, "Father's Brilliant Idea," will be shown. If you enjoy high-class comedy pictures, tonight and tomorrow you will have an unequalled opportunity to laugh.
